With a view to strengthen the UN-EU partnership, the United Nations Secretary-General, António Guterres, touched down in Strasbourg on 17 May to address the Plenary of the European Parliament for the first time since taking office. He expressed his strong support for the European Union, calling it the “most successful project of peace sustainability” and underlining that a “strong and united Europe is an absolutely fundamental pillar of a strong and effective United Nations”. He thanked the EU for its commitment to multilateralism and its generous contribution to development, humanitarian efforts and to the core of UN action, namely peace and security. He mentioned the EU’s work in Libya, the EU funding for AMISOM in Somalia, and the EU’s financial support and training & capacity building in the Central African Republic and Mali (adding that he was looking forward to the contribution for the G5 Sahel Joint Task Force). He stressed the importance of UN-EU cooperation in working together to meet the unprecedented challenges facing the international community, primarily the multiplication of conflicts that are more protracted and increasingly linked to regional and global issues, including terrorism. The Secretary-General received a standing ovation from the Members of the European Parliament and European Parliament President Tajani assured the EU’s continued commitment to the partnership.

During her annual briefing to the Security Council on 9 May, the High Representative of the European Union for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy and Vice-President of the European Commission (HR/VP), Federica Mogherini, said that, despite challenges, the EU has recently made important steps in becoming a stronger partner for the UN in the realm of peace and security. Within the framework of the EU Global Strategy on Foreign Affairs and Security Policy (adopted in June 2016 to replace the 2003 European Security Strategy), the EU adopted in November 2016 the Implementation Plan on Security and Defence. On 6 March, the Military Planning and Conduct Capability was agreed for non-executive military missions (for example the EU Training Missions in Central African Republic, Mali and Somalia). The EU also launched the European Defence Fund that will support both research and capabilities and help incentivise Permanent Structured Cooperation. Further priorities include a Coordinated Annual Review on Defence and civilian capability development, including a standing capacity.
New Head of UN Department of Peacekeeping Operations engages European partners

The newly appointed Under-Secretary-General (USG) for Peacekeeping Operations, Jean-Pierre Lacroix, briefed EU Defence Ministers at their informal summit on 28 March in Malta, addressing the Secretary-General’s current priorities and existing capability gaps in UN peacekeeping operations. He also held a range of bilateral meetings with EU Defence Ministers.

A month later, he paid his first visit to Brussels in his new role on 4-5 May. While in Brussels, USG Lacroix met with high-level EU officials as well as with the Defence Minister of Belgium, Steven Vandeput, to explore areas of cooperation.

USG Lacroix, alongside DPA Assistant Secretary-General for Political Affairs, Miroslav Jenča, also co-chaired the annual UN-NATO staff talks that centred around technical cooperation, including counter-IED, training and exercises, and women, peace and security.

Speaking to Radio France Internationale on 5 May, USG Lacroix said that “we are in contact with partners of the European Union who can do a lot to fill our gaps in critical enablers, notably helicopters, but also in other areas: intelligence, surveillance, counter-IED and much more”. He confirmed that the Defence Ministers were “very positive and encouraging” regarding these issues.

It is expected that European Defence Ministers, alongside senior EU and NATO officials, will participate in the 2017 UN Peacekeeping Defence Ministerial which take place in Vancouver, Canada on 14-15 November. The Ministerial builds on the 2015 Leaders’ Summit on peacekeeping and the 2016 London Ministerial on peacekeeping where European countries, the EU and NATO actively participated and put forward pledges. Both the EU and NATO will also participate in the upcoming UN Chiefs of Defence (CHODs) Conference on 6 and 7 July at UN Headquarters in New York, which builds on the first such UN CHODs conference held in 2015.
The UN-EU Steering Committee on Crisis Management took place on 16 March 2017 at UN Headquarters, in New York.

Co-chaired by (now former) USG for peacekeeping operations Hervé Ladsous and European External Action Service (EEAS) Deputy Secretary General Pedro Serrano, the 21st edition of this bi-annual meeting yielded important results for UN-EU cooperation.

The UN and EU endorsed the UN-EU joint framework agreement on mutual support and agreed to take forward joint UN-EU planning modalities for rapid response, underlining the importance of the UN-EU partnership in peacekeeping and crisis management. The EU highlighted its support for a strong UN and for the new UN Secretary-General António Guterres.

On Mali, the UN and EU agreed to enhance practical cooperation on the ground and to jointly support regional efforts of the G5 Sahel group. Furthermore, the UN and EU agreed to collaborate closely on security sector reform issues in the Central African Republic under the leadership of the national authorities. Additionally, they exchanged views and analysis on Libya and Somalia. Trilateral UN-EU-African Union (AU) cooperation and the AU-UN Joint Review on AMISOM also featured in the discussions.

The UN and the EU examined fundamental elements of sustaining peace and assessed conflict prevention tools during the third annual UN-EU Conflict Prevention Dialogue on 23 March in Brussels. Discussions focused on enabling environments for conflict prevention, resilience and working in an integrated manner in view of the EU integrated approach and the Joint UNDP-DPA Programme on Building National Capacities for Conflict Prevention.

Ahead of the dialogue, Stephen Jackson of DPA’s Policy and Mediation Division briefed the EU Council Working Group on the UN (CONUN) on conflict prevention, mediation and areas of UN cooperation with the EU.
Brussels political update

The United Kingdom triggered Article 50 of the Lisbon Treaty on 29 March and, one month later, the remaining 27 EU member states formally approved the Brexit negotiating guidelines put forward by Council President Tusk. Echoing the resolution adopted by the European Parliament - which will have to approve the deal two years from now - the EU member states have called for a phased approach, reaching agreement on the rights of citizens and financial obligations, as well as safeguarding the Good Friday Agreement, before trade negotiations can start. The UK prefers simultaneous negotiations. After the snap elections on 8 June, the talks will start in earnest.

Brexit also provided additional context for the Rome Summit on 25 March, held to mark the 60th Anniversary of the Treaty of Rome that created the European Commission. In advance of the Summit, President Juncker issued a White Paper on the Future of Europe, introducing the idea of a multi-speed Europe, namely the further integration of those member states that are willing and able to do so.

Critical European national elections in recent months have been closely observed in Brussels. The parliamentary elections in the Netherlands saw sitting Prime Minister Mark Rutte’s VVD score a convincing win over the far-right while, in France, Emmanuel Macron – running on a pro-EU platform - won the second round of the French Presidential elections with a large margin. Both victories were warmly welcomed in Brussels. Meanwhile, in mid-January, Martin Schulz, the centre-left President of the European Parliament stepped down in order to run against Chancellor Merkel in the German elections later this year, being replaced at the helm of the European Parliament by centre-right MEP, Antonio Tajani.

The Eastern Partnership remained high on the agenda in Brussels, with both Ukraine and Georgia securing visa liberalisation agreements. In December, EU leaders agreed to Dutch Prime Minister Rutte’s proposal for a legally binding declaration to reflect the result of the April 2016 Dutch referendum on the EU-Ukraine Association Agreement to clarify that the Association Agreement does not necessarily lead to accession. On the Western Balkans, visits by Presidents Juncker and Tusk and HR/VP Mogherini to capitals over the past few months are indicative of a wider policy of the EU to engage more in the region.

In a first, Malta took up the rotating Presidency of the Council of the European Union in January. On 3 February, EU leaders adopted the Malta Declaration and announced 200 million euros of programming through the Africa Trust Fund for North Africa to address the Central Mediterranean Route, including those traveling through Libya. The EU has been a consistent supporter to the UN mediation efforts and the United Nations Support Mission in Libya (UNSMIL) and has also heavily engaged itself, through Operation Sophia, and becoming part of the “Quartet” on Libya together with the United Nations, the League of Arab States and the African Union.

The EU held a donor conference on Syria on 5 April, attended by the UN Secretary-General, mobilizing over six billion euros in pledges for the country in 2017. Previously, a donor conference on the Central African Republic on 17 November saw pledges of more than two billion euros. The new 95 million euros EU Trust Fund for Colombia was launched in December.
UN-EU Political Dialogue on Counter-Terrorism

On 3 March, the annual UN-EU Political Dialogue on Counter-Terrorism gathered UN and EU representatives in Brussels to exchange updates on their ongoing work on counter-terrorism and prevention of violent extremism. Experts shared threat assessments and policy priorities and identified areas for further cooperation. Director of the UN Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force and the Counter-Terrorism Centre, Jehangir Khan, headed the UN delegation and also held bilateral meetings with his counterparts.

Prevention of violent extremism has significantly risen on the agendas of both organizations and counter-terrorism has gained a more prominent place in the institutional setup, with the recent establishment of an EU Commissioner for Security Union and a proposal before the General Assembly to create a new office for counter-terrorism in the UN.

NATO update

The fight against terrorism and transatlantic burden-sharing were prioritised at the meeting of NATO heads of state and government which took place on 25 May in Brussels, attended by the new Presidents of the United States and France, Donald Trump and Emmanuel Macron.

Montenegro, which has since then become the 29th member of the Alliance, also sat at the table. Romania declared that it will reach the NATO two percent of GDP defence spending target this year and would become one of the six allies meeting this target.

The EU and NATO are cooperating on a range of areas from cyber security to cooperation in the Mediterranean. NATO Secretary General, Jens Stoltenberg, said in his speech to the European Parliament on 3 May that NATO’s cooperation with the EU “has become the norm rather than the exception”.

On 15 and 16 February, NATO Defence Ministers decided to strengthen NATO’s presence in the Black Sea region, approved a Cyber Defence plan and decided to create a military hub at NATO’s Joint Force Command in Naples to gather intelligence and situational awareness in the Mediterranean region. NATO also received a request from Libya’s Government of National Accord for NATO advice and expertise in defence and security institution building.
